The Radlett & District Museum is a registered charity and administered by a board of trustees.

The aim of the trustees is to preserve and exhibit the considerable archive of documents, photographs, pictures and memorabilia relating to Radlett and its surrounding areas including Aldenham and Letchmore Heath.

The museum also presents recordings and transcripts of interviews with local residents.

We welcome visitors to the Museum during published opening times. Schools and local groups are requested to notify us at least two weeks in advance of intended visits. Off-site exhibitions will be held from time to time. Talks and presentations are also offered on request.

Apart from the permanent displays, themed exhibitions (for example: Schools, Religious Establishments, Radlett in the First and Second World Wars, Transport) will be presented periodically.

We may be contacted:
