Conservation Area Appraisal

Public Consultation - 17 June to 29 July 2013

We have undertaken a review of the Bushey Heath High Road Conservation Area, which includes Windmill Lane, High Road and Hartsbourne Park.

We are proposing removing its status as a conservation area, which is known as de-designation, and using alternative ways of protecting the character of the area.

Before any changes are considered we would like to hear from local residents, businesses and anyone else who has an interest in the Conservation Area and its future development.

Where did these plans come from?

We have a statutory responsibility to review its Conservation Areas from time to time. Our conservation consultants, the Built Environment Advisory and Management Service (BEAMS), part of the Hertfordshire Building Preservation Trust, carried out an assessment of the Conservation Area. This review looked at the character of Bushey Heath High Road Conservation Area, and if it should be protected as a historically important part of the Borough.

What did the review look at?

The Draft Bushey Heath High Road Appraisal also looked at the ways in which its character could be preserved and enhanced for future generations. Different areas or 'character zones' within the Bushey Heath High Road Conservation Area and analyse each in detail, taking in what were considered to be good, neutral and bad features. The 'character areas' are shown in the map:

Area 1 contains two blocks of four terraced Victorian houses, which have had a good number of changes that do not contribute positively to the historic character of the area, including inconsistent or inappropriate extensions, and changes to window openings.

Area 2 is the core of the Conservation Area with the most historic assets. It contains a Tree Preservation Order (TPO), all the Listed Buildings in the Area and the four buildings proposed for the List of Locally Important Buildings. The front boundary treatment along High Road adds significantly to the character of the area, with substantial vegetation and brick walls.

Area 3 is the Hartsbourne Park site, which is not historic, but does benefit from the protection of a TPO on all the trees and attractive front boundary walls and hedging. The grey area is the recently built site and not considered to add to the historic character.

What are the proposed changes?

We feel that the Bushey Heath High Road Conservation Area has the potential to remain an attractive area, but a Conservation Area is not an appropriate way to manage the area and other forms of protection for specific features would be more effective.

When the area was designated in 1990 Hartsbourne Park had just been granted planning permission, which was included in the designation. It's thought that the original designation of the Conservation Area was just acceptable at the time, and it is now infrequent to de-designate an area.

A Conservation Area is used to protect and enhance the historic character of the area, and unfortunately changes have been made, through permitted development rights, the grant of planning permission and other street scene changes that have a cumulative and negative effect on the historic character of the area.

It is also recommended in the appraisal that:

- Dwellings on the High Road including numbers 158, 160, 162 and 168 are considered as Locally Important Buildings;
- The area is reviewed for significant trees for potential protection orders; and
- An Article 4 Direction is considered for the replacement of front boundary treatment along High Road.

Will the area be affected if the Conservation Area is de-designated?

It is felt that the Conservation Area has not satisfactorily protected the character of the area over the last 23 years. There are a number of reasons for that. Even where there is a Conservation Area householders can still undertake a certain amount of permitted development, and planning applications are granted which have a complex history or are determined by the Planning Inspectorate.

If the Conservation Area were de-designated other measures could be implemented to protect the features that are valuable in the area. The de-designation would not take place without other measures being in place at the same time.

If there were a planning application at a site adjoining a Listed Building or a TPO, they would be a significant consideration for potential development.

How can I give my views?

Before we make any changes we would like your input. Are you aware of any other important areas for improvement? Do you have any innovative ideas for managing the character of the area?
